

No Worries Virtual Assistance Offers Vital Services to Small Business Owners

Introducing a women owned small business offering services to small business owners.

Bethlehem, PA, February 19, 2008 --(PR.com)-- No Worries Virtual Assistance, a certified and ethics checked service based small business, celebrates six months of partnering with successful, self-employed entrepreneurs.

Many small business owners find that they are spending their precious time and energy doing things that have nothing to do with their passions.

No Worries Virtual Assistance offers a solution by partnering a virtual assistant with the small business owner. A virtual assistant helps entrepreneurs take their time back and take their business to a whole new level, reclaim what they are most passionate about and determine the journey of their business, rather than letting the lack of time decide for them.

A virtual assistant (VA) is a highly-trained, independent entrepreneur who provides a wide range of business support services to individuals who really need the support in their businesses. These services are done virtually via telephone, fax and internet based technologies.

Partnering with a VA allows entrepreneurs to reduce stress, protect cash flow and eliminate administrative duties. They can then get back to doing what they do best and leave the rest up to their VA.

Owner and CEO, Lynne Walls, offers thirty years of experience in customer service and office administration for AT&T, Day-Timers, Telerx and Crayola. During the last fifteen years in the corporate world she worked in supervisory and managerial roles, participating in two business start ups during that time. No Worries Virtual Assistance is able to offer a wide array of administrative services due to Ms.Walls extensive experience.
